ABSTRACT

This directory offers a list of providers, planners, and researchers involved in respite care services for families with children who are mentally retarded, behaviorally disturbed, or physically disabled. The directory, based on information available as of October 1989, lists over 1,800 respite care providers and their addresses and telephone numbers. The entries are arranged alphabetically by state. An appendix, revised in December 1990, lists respite care and crisis nursery service providers who are grantees of funding under the Temporary Child Care for Children with Disabilities and Crisis Nurseries Act. LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

SELECT COMMITTEE ON CHILDREN, YOUTH, AND FAMILIES,
Washington, DC, December 21, 1990.

Hon. DONNALD K. ANDERSON,
Clerk, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. ANDERSON: We are pleased to transmit the enclosed four reports entitled "Report on the Activities for the Year 1989 of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, 101st Congress, First Session." "Federal Programs Affecting Children and Their Families, 1990," "Opportunities for Success: Cost-Effective Programs for Children, Update, 1990," and "Respite Care: A Listing of Resources."

These documents are transmitted in accordance with Title II, Section 206(a) of H. Res. 84, and, in addition to reports entitled "U.S. Children and Their Families: Current Conditions and Recent Trends, 1989," "No Place to Call Home: Discarded Children in America," and "Children's Well-Being: An International Comparison" which were submitted earlier, summarize some of the major findings of the Committee during the First and Second Sessions of the 101st Congress.

A final document, "Activities Report for the Year 1990 of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, 101st Congress, Second Session," will follow.

Respectfully submitted.

Sincerely,

GEORGE MILLER, Chairman.

The Honorable George Miller
Chairman, Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families
House of Representatives

Dear Mr. Chairman:

Early in our review of respite care for your office, we became aware of various public and private agencies' grassroots efforts to develop a network of people involved in respite care services. In March 1990, we discussed these efforts with your staff, who asked us to compile a listing of providers, planners, and researchers involved in respite care services for families with children who are mentally retarded, behaviorally disturbed, or physically disabled.

The enclosed listing is based on information available as of October 1989. Although the listing identifies over 1,800 respite care providers and agencies, it is not a complete listing and represents only the directories and listings that were voluntarily provided to us. Further, we did not verify the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of the people and agencies listed. Notwithstanding these factors, however, the listing should be useful to people involved in respite care.

Because your office indicated it may need a computerized data set that could be sent to the states and used to print a committee report, we are also providing a computer disk containing the data included in the listing. The disk is in a format usable with WordPerfect 4.2 software.

We are pleased to provide you with this listing obtained as a by-product of our review of respite care. We are also sending a copy of this listing to the Honorable Major Owens, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Select Education, House Committee on Education and Labor, who jointly requested our review. If you have any questions, please call me on (313) 256-8000.

Sincerely,

John H. Luke

RESPITE CARE: A LISTING OF RESOURCES

FOREWORD

The Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families has shown that respite care holds promise in alleviating family stress, and promoting family stability. Families who use respite care report that they are satisfied with the service and that they derive numerous benefits. Because respite care originated at the grassroots level, little information has been gathered on a national basis regarding the availability or usefulness of this service.

A recent report by the United States General Accounting Office (GAO), RESPITE CARE: An Overview of Federal, Selected State, and Private Programs, [GAO/HRD-90-125] provides critical new information on:

- the availability and nature of respite care programs in the United States and characteristics of families eligible to receive such services;
- how families use respite care services, what difference these services make in their lives, and how families cope without such services; and
- views of program officials, service providers, and users on enhancing the federal government's role in respite care and how existing services could be improved.

During the course of this 25-state review, the GAO compiled a list of providers, planners and researchers involved in respite care services for families with disabled children. Although the list identifies over 1,800 resources, it is not exhaustive. It includes only listings voluntarily provided to the GAO.

The list also does not address the adequacy or sufficiency of available respite care programs. The GAO found that despite the satisfaction and benefits families report from respite care use, study participants believe that the demand for respite care exceeds the supply. Forty state-funded programs identified by the GAO reported 3,700 families on waiting lists in FY 1988. In addition, 77 programs had referred families to other social programs for respite care services because the families had requested more services than were available or the number of families and other caretakers requesting services exceeded those available.

Given the dearth of information available at the national, state or local level on the availability of respite care, we are pleased to make this valuable resource, Respite Care: A Listing of Resources, available to families, providers, and interested parties.

We would like to acknowledge the efforts of David P. Bixler, Assistant Director, Human Resources Division, GAO, Washington, D.C., and William F. Laurie, Evaluator-in-Charge and Theodore F. Boyden, Site Senior in GAO's Detroit Regional Office, and others, in compiling the report and making this listing available to us for distribution. To the extent possible, staff of the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families has verified the addresses and telephone numbers included in this listing.
